Izjava o akademskoj čestitosti

Ja, Luka Baule, ovime izjavljujem da je moj diplomski rad pod naslovom Descriptive Analysis of PUs in Songs by Guns N' Roses rezultat mojega vlastitog rada, da se temelji na mojim istraživanjima te da se oslanja na izvore i radove navedene u bilješkama i popisu literature. Ni jedan dio mojega rada nije napisan na nedopušten način, odnosno nije prepisan iz necitiranih radova i ne krši bilo čija autorska prava.

Izjavljujem da ni jedan dio ovoga rada nije iskorišten u kojem drugom radu pri bilo kojoj drugoj visokoškolskoj, znanstvenoj, obrazovnoj ili inoj ustanovi.

Sadržaj mojega rada u potpunosti odgovara sadržaju obranjenoga i nakon obrane uređenoga rada.

1. Introduction

Phraseology, as a relatively new linguistic discipline, remains a rather unexplored field of study with a nearly unlimited number of domains ripe for research as a consequence of the constant evolution of language. Moreover, there is a multitude of classification systems based on varying, yet most often overlapping criteria for the analysis of phraseological units (hereinafter referred to as PUs). Therefore, the album Use Your Illusion I by the American rock band Guns N' Roses appears to be a rather fascinating corpus for phraseological research by virtue of the band's lasting popularity and, more importantly, the fact that it is easy to notice an abundance of potential PUs in their lyrics even upon a superficial reading.

The aim of this research is to establish the quality and quantity of PUs in the lyrics of Guns N' Roses songs from the previously mentioned album in order to showcase the expressiveness of the lyrics in question achieved via a wide variety of different types of PUs. To that end, the first part of research will focus on the identification and subsequent classification of the types of PUs contained within the lyrics, as well as uncover the extent to which certain types are represented in the entire corpus. Namely, the presence of PUs in the corpus will be confirmed using various online dictionaries and other Internet sources and subsequently classified in accordance with the conventional types of PUs in most classification systems, as well certain special types of PUs, as presented in Sabine Fiedler's English Phraseology: A Coursebook. Moreover, the meaning of the PUs in the context of the corpus will be provided whenever possible in order to establish the way in which they embellish the subject matter of the songs.

The second step of the research will examine the modifications which certain PUs may have undergone, also in accordance with Fiedler's book. These modifications will be identified and classified, while the possible motivations for their occurrence, as well as the extent to which each type is represented in the entire corpus, will also be explored.

2. Theoretical Framework

Before the PUs in the corpus can be analysed, the seven basic properties of a PU must be presented for the purpose of understanding certain decisions that may be made during the analysis of potentially problematic cases. Firstly, PUs are polylexemic in terms of structure. In other words, a PU may range from a word group to one or more sentences. Secondly, PUs are rather stable with regard to both syntax and meaning; however, certain variations may be made, such as substitution of function words, as well as a change in spelling, grammatical number, or even lexical elements. Thirdly, PUs are lexicalised, i.e. the members of a language community have accepted them as a part of the lexicon. The process during which a newly coined word group secures its place in the collective memory of a language community is called institutionalisation. The fourth important trait of PUs is their idiomaticity, which refers to the fact the meaning of a PU may be not be easily deducible from the sum of its constituting elements. The difficulty of deducing the meaning of a PU based solely on the meanings of its components may vary. Furthermore, even though certain PUs may be completely transparent regarding their respective meanings, they still retain their status due to their polylexemic structure, syntactic and semantic stability, as well as their lexicalisation. The fifth essential feature of PUs is their connotative nature, which adds a higher degree of expressiveness to texts. Connotations may be stylistic, ranging from formal to informal, or expressive, implying a speaker's/writer's attitude towards the topic of their statement. The sixth property of PUs is the fact that they generally do not retain their idiomaticity after undergoing syntactic changes such as passivisation or topicalisation; nonetheless, much like the degree of idiomaticity, this extent to which PUs are prone to these syntactic transformations is highly variable. Finally, PUs may be ungrammatical in terms of form or may contain elements which are no longer part of the lexicon (Fiedler 17-28).

In English Phraseology: A Coursebook, Sabine Fiedler compiled the types of PUs found in most classification systems into a relatively comprehensive list of the most common, as well as several special ones. The types which Fiedler has listed as "conventional" are phraseological nominations, irreversible binomials, stereotyped comparisons, proverbs, winged words and routine formulae. Phraseological nominations substitute words and have a wide array of functions. Irreversible binomials consist of two components which share most, if not all, grammatical properties and appear in a fixed order, connected by either a conjunction or a preposition. Stereotyped comparisons ("frozen similes") are defined by their rigid structure which is ingrained in the minds of members of a language community. Likewise, proverbs are fixed memorable sentences which reflect the values of a language community in which they exist. On the other hand, winged words are determined not by originating from a vacuum of shared knowledge or experiences within a culture, but by the existence of a traceable source. Routine formulae form a part of general discourse and are thus defined by their pragmatic function along with their conventionalised structure (Fiedler 39-50). Although there are four "special" types of PUs as described by Fiedler, only two of those are relevant to the topic in question and will therefore be elaborated for the purposes of this paper: paraphrasal verbs and restricted collocations. The former type refers to transitive verbs with a variety of meanings accompanied by noun phrases which carry the actual meaning of such syntactic constructions, therefore these entire constructions can often be substituted by a single word which would be the noun forming the noun phrase converted into a verb. These word groups express duration, cause or the beginning of an action denoted by the noun phrase. The latter type refers to combinations of words which often appear together and where one component is used in a figurative sense (Fiedler 51-53).

It should be noted that, although seemingly practical, Fiedler's classification suffers from a lack of an overarching criterion according to which PUs are categorised, which in turn may result in a certain degree of overlap between certain types of PUs. In order to overcome this issue, such PUs will be sorted into the categories whose properties they possess to the fullest extent, or ultimately classified in a certain manner at the researcher's discretion when their respective types cannot be established using objective criteria.

In her book, Fiedler also lists five types of modification: substitution, expansion, reduction, permutation, as well as a change in the grammatical polarity of a PU. Substitution, the most frequent of the five type, refers to the change in one or several elements of a PU in order for the PU to be more suitable for the context in which it is used. Expansion refers to the addition of new constituents to a PU in order to create a connection between a PU and a text or to further delineate the meaning of a PU, usually focusing on its literal meaning. Reduction is the removal of one or more constituents. Permutation is a change of word order in a PU. The final type of modification lacks a specific name and Fiedler refers to it as either the affirmation of a typically negative PU or the negation of a typically affirmative PU. The modifications are utilised in order to further enhance the impact a text may have on the reader (Fiedler 90-96).

3. Methodology, Corpus and References

3.1. Methodology

Firstly, the potential PUs found in the corpus will be extracted in order that their lexicalisation may be confirmed by one or several lexicographic sources. Those instances of word groups confirmed to be PUs will subsequently be classified in accordance with the categorisation by Sabine Fiedler in English Phraseology: A Coursebook.

Secondly, not only will the PUs be examined with regard to their type, but they will also be analysed in order to detect and explain the modifications which they may have been undergone (and the possible respective motivations for such changes) in accordance with the basic types of PU modification elaborated by Fiedler.

3.2. The Corpus

The corpus consists of 192 PUs contained within the lyrics to the 15 songs from the album Use Your Illusion I by Guns N' Roses. 155 of those 192 PUs are phraseological nominations, while the remaining PUs consist of 2 irreversible binomials, 5 proverbs, 4 winged words, 16 routine formulae, 7 paraphrasal verbs and 3 restricted collocations. Although the album consists of 16 tracks, the track Live and Let Die is written and originally performed by Paul McCartney and the Wings and therefore will not be included in the analysis.

The album in question was chosen as a corpus due to its evident abundance of PUs; namely, even a superficial reading of the lyrics to certain songs suggests a potentially large number of various types of PUs, as well as of various PU modifications which may be examined. The source of the corpus is the booklet accompanying the original CD in order to ensure the accuracy of the lyrics, since the lyrics found online are usually transcribed without consulting the album booklet and thus often contain mistakes. For this reason, the accurate version of the entire corpus is provided in the Appendix (p. 36-39).

The most characteristic feature of the entire corpus is the highly colloquial writing style of its principal authors, the singer Axl Rose and the guitarist Izzy Stradlin' (Appendix, p. 36-39). Most notably, certain words are often spelled "incorrectly" in order to mimic the pronunciation and the accent which Rose (as well as Stradlin', who assumes lead vocal duties on several songs) uses to sing certain lines from the lyrics, while the vocabulary used is rather informal and often marked by profanities.

Since the meanings of the identified PUs will be presented in the context of the respective lyrics in which the PUs in question appear, a short summary of the general topics which the songs from the album explore will be listed. Right Next Door to Hell, Perfect Crime, Double Talkin' Jive and Bad Apples describe the problematic aspects of fame ("Right Next Door to Hell – Guns N' Roses Song Facts and Meaning!"; Pareles; "Meaning Of The Title Double Talkin' Jive"; "Every Guns N' Roses Song Ranked, Worst To Best"). Don't Cry, You Ain't the First, Back Off Bitch, November Rain and Dead Horse describe failing romantic relationships from various perspectives ("Don't Cry By Guns N' Roses – Songfacts"; "Every Guns N' Roses Song Ranked, Worst To Best"; Neely; Thomson; "Guns N' Roses - Dead Horse Lyrics | Songmeanings"). Bad Obsession, The Garden and Coma describe the problems the band members had with drug abuse at the height of their fame (Harrington; "Guns N' Roses - The Garden Lyrics | Songmeanings"). Dust N' Bones portrays Izzy Stradlin's wry outlook on the darker aspects of life ("Guns N' Roses - Dust N' Bones Lyrics | Songmeanings"). Garden of Eden offers a commentary on the socio-political circumstances in the USA at the end of the 1980s and the very beginning of 1990s (Pareles). Finally, Don't Damn Me was written as a response to the controversy sparked by the lyrics to the song One in a Million, which was featured on the band's previous release, G N' R Lies (Burger).

3.3. Lexicographic Sources

In order to identify PUs lexicographically, multiple sources were used. Due to the fact that Internet sources are readily available and also more convenient where regularity of updating entries is concerned, they were used exclusively for the purposes of this research. The sources in question were: Cambridge Dictionary, The Free Dictionary by Farlex, Dictionary by Merriam-Webster, Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English, Macmillan Dictionary, Dictionary.com, Collins Online Dictionary, YourDictionary, Urban Dictionary, English Language & Usage Stack Exchange, UsingEnglish.com, Quora, The Phrase Finder, Know Your Phrase, WordReference, TripAdvisor, Angel City Review, Balboa Press, Hackernoon, Lynn Baber, Elephant Journal, Songsforteaching.com, CNN.com and Lexico (Cambridge Dictionary; "Idioms and phrases."; Dictionary by Merriam-Webster; Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English; Macmillan Dictionary; Dictionary.com; Collins Online Dictionary; Urban Dictionary; "History of the phrase "The walls are closing in"; "too much to handle."; "What does the following phrase mean: "She's taking it pretty badly"?? - Quora"; "Why Do People Always Say Nothing Lasts Forever? - Quora"); "The meaning and origin of the expression: Silence is golden"; "You Can't Judge a Book By Its Cover - Phrase Meaning, Idiom Origins"; "Give a kiss to someone"; "weary bones"; O, Ciaran; Khayat; "Let Me Give You A Whisper"; Pakalniškis; Baber; Morgan; Schellinger; "CNN.com - Transcripts"; "Definition Of 'Don't You Know"). Each source was chosen either because it provided the most accurate definitions of specific PUs in accordance with the meaning of those PUs in the context of the corpus or because it was the only reliable source for confirming the lexicalisation of certain PUs.

Due to the lack of dictionary entries for specific PUs found in the corpus, sources less formal in character than typical online dictionaries, such as Urban Dictionary various Internet forums or similar websites, were utilised in those instances. Although informal, the sources in question nevertheless provide an invaluable proof of the lexicalisation of certain PUs, while also presenting their respective meanings either explicitly or implicitly. Since some of those sources do not contain the definitions of their corresponding PUs or the definitions given are not presented in a concise and formal manner, both the basic forms and definitions of the PUs in question will be provided at the researcher's discretion in the "Dictionary entry/Reference" and "Meaning" cells in the tables, respectively.

4. Identification and Classification of PUs

The analysis concerning the identification and classification of PUs will be presented in the form of tables, with each table being dedicated to a particular type of PUs. Each row within a table will consist of three cells: the first one will contain the form of the PU as found in the corpus; the second one will contain the lexicographic entry of the PU in question with the corresponding lexicographic source used to confirm a PU's lexicalisation, while the third cell will contain the meaning of the PU as presented in the lexicographic source provided in the second cell.

Moreover, only one instance of a specific PU will be analysed, with the exception of one or more remaining instances exhibiting differences in relation to their antecedent (i.e. multiple instances of a PU with variable constituents); those instances will be listed in the same cell as the antecedent. PUs will be listed in order of appearance for each category, with the exception of the above-mentioned variants.

The PUs listed in each table will be followed by the text containing the analysis of their various properties in accordance with Fiedler's classification.

4.1. Phraseological Nominations

Counting 155 instances, phraseological nominations are by far the most represented type of PUs in the corpus. This may be attributed to the fact that they are rather vaguely defined by Fiedler. In Table 1, all phraseological nominations in the corpus will be presented in accordance with the principles stated in the preceding section, while the analysis of their various properties will be given in the sections following the table.

All PUs belonging to this category are characterised by a highly colloquial and/or vulgar style, which can be discerned when focusing on the often irregular orthograpy (e.g. old timer, peace o' mind, don't fuck wit'da bad side o' me), as well as on the commonplace and often profane vocabulary (e.g. a son of a gun/the gun of a son, one way ticket to your suicide, a fucking waste of time, son of a bitch, drives me out of my mind, sick in the head/brain, etc.). What follows is the categorisation of phraseological nominations according to the word class they represent, respectively. Besides the categorisation, the following sections will also list the functions of the phraseological nominations in question.

4.1.1. Descriptive Analysis of Noun-equivalent Phraseological Nominations

There are 24 phraseological nominations which act as noun equivalents: your pockets get deeper, old timer, perfect crime, the skeletons, last rites, come on, claim to fame, hearts can change, glass jawed, kiss ass, point of view, whole story, missing link, a fucking waste of time, bad apples, peace o' mind, up to me, deep end, a son of a gun/the gun of a son, old soul, the light at the end, son of a bitch, one way ticket to your suicide and point of breaking.

Old timer, kiss ass, bad apples, a son of a gun/the gun of a son, old soul and son of a bitch denote people; perfect crime, the skeletons, claim to fame, hearts can change, glass jawed, point of view, whole story, peace o' mind, deep end, a fucking waste of time, the light at the end, one way ticket to your suicide and point of breaking signify states; your pockets get deeper and last rites denote processes; come on, missing link and up to me signify relations.

4.1.2. Descriptive Analysis of Verb-equivalent Phraseological Nominations

The corpus contains 101 phraseological nominations which function like verbs: take a nicotine, caffeine, sugar fix, git tired of, turnin' tricks, rest my bones/head, sit for a spell, so many eyes are on me, drives me up the walls, drives me out of my mind, lost his mind, to see the next day, rip you right in two, get to you, get out, go your own way, hang your head in sorrow, take it so hard/bad, make it, kickin' back, got the time, lay it all on the line, keep the demons down, fuck with me, don't fuck wit'da bad side o' me, stay away, was thinking about something, call on, locked them away, running through the visions, let me be, get through to you, you've worn your welcome, see you along, your day's been numbered, I've read your last page, look for me, be in with another, sinkin' down, ta give me a line, you're better off, left behind, messin' my mind, you're fucked up, take it down, you let me down, ain't playing childhood games, even the score, stake your claim, back off, makin' love, gone on a binge, you're off the hinge, livin' on the run, double talkin', we've been through this, who's lettin' go, walkin' away, take the time, end up, broken heart, take a chance, wrestle with, got the blues, line up, went straight to my head, I've been dragging my heels, they'd sell my soul, speak a piece of mind, I'm holding it inside, put the pen to the paper, hold my tongue, speaks of, get even, give up, give a fuck, tears into, take for granted, read what we want between selected lines, money to burn, got my head in the clouds, give me a lift, paint a story, got to (make a living), make a living, bring yourself to (sell), musta seen me comin', leave me be, I'd have all the bases covered, your laundry could use washing / we'll hang it up all over town, suckin' down, I'm beating a dead horse, you'd be bringing me down, came to me, the dust is startin' to clear, are calling back to me, slipping farther and farther away, used to live, has left you in the cold, waving goodbye, would have seen it coming, drop a dime and take some time.

The phraseological nominations acting as verb equivalents which denote states are: git tired of, so many eyes are on me, drives me up the walls, drives me out of my mind, lost his mind, rip you right in two, get to you, hang your head in sorrow, take it so hard/bad, kickin' back, got the time, stay away, you've worn your welcome, your day's been numbered, sinkin' down, you're better off, you're fucked up, gone on a binge, you're off the hinge, end up, got the blues, went straight to my head, I'm holding it inside, hold my tongue, speaks of, give a fuck, take for granted, money to burn, got my head in the clouds, got to (make a living), I'd have all the bases covered, came to me, the dust is startin' to clear, slipping farther and farther away and used to live.

The phraseological nominations acting as verb equivalents which denote processes are: take a nicotine, caffeine, sugar fix, turnin' tricks, rest my bones/head, sit for a spell, to see the next day, get out, go your own way, make it, lay it all on the line, keep the demons down, stay away, was thinking about something, call on, locked them away, running through the visions, get through to you, see you along, I've read your last page, look for me, ta give me a line, left behind, messin' my mind, take it down, ain't playing childhood games, even the score, stake your claim, back off, makin' love, livin' on the run, double talkin', we've been through this, who's lettin' go, walkin' away, take the time, broken heart, take a chance, wrestle with, line up, I've been dragging my heels, they'd sell my soul, speak a piece of mind, put the pen to the paper, get even, give up, tears into, read what we want between selected lines, give me a lift, paint a story, make a living, bring yourself to (sell), musta seen me comin', your laundry could use washing / we'll hang it up all over town, suckin' down, I'm beating a dead horse, are calling back to me, has left you in the cold, waving goodbye, would have seen it coming, drop a dime and take some time.

The phraseological nominations acting as verb equivalents which denote relations are: fuck with me, don't fuck wit'da bad side o' me, let me be, be in with another, you let me down, leave me be, you'd be bringing me down,

4.1.3. Descriptive Analysis of Adjective-equivalent Phraseological Nominations

There are 18 adjective-equivalent phraseological nominations in the corpus: born to lose, dead end, the walls are closing in on me, too much to handle, time's too much for me, sick in the head/brain, out of place, out to, out of control, on edge, for a while, like a mother, up to date, nice and, sick of this life, wet behind the ears, full of shit and nobody's home. All phraseological nominations found in the corpus belonging to this subcategory signify various states.

4.1.4. Descriptive Analysis of Adverb-equivalent Phraseological Nominations

The corpus contains 12 phraseological nominations which function as adverb equivalents: right next door, on your own, in the end, your own way, come the morning light, deep down inside, on their knees, a tad, around this track, when the shit hit the fan, at the crossroads and on the line. Like the phraseological nominations from the preceding section, the phraseological nominations belonging to this subcategory also signify various states exclusively.

4.2. Irreversible Binomials

While there are only two instances of irreversible binomials in the corpus, the PUs in question will nevertheless be presented in the form of a table with the following text elaborating on its contents not only because of the convenience of the method in question, but also in order to maintain the uniformity of the manner in which this part of analysis is presented.

Table 2
Overview of Irreversible Binomials

	Phraseological unit	Dictionary	Meaning entry/Reference
1	lovers always come	come and go	'used to talk about people who appear and
	and lovers always go	- Merriam-Webster	then leave as time passes'
2	rock n' roll	rock and roll / rock	'a style of popular dance music that began
		'n' roll – Cambridge	in the 1950s in the US and has a strong,

The two irreversible binomials found in the corpus are lovers always come and lovers always go, an expanded variant of come and go, and rock n' roll, a colloquial variant of rock and roll.

From a semantic perspective, lovers always come and lovers always go consists of two constituents which are opposite in meaning to one another, which is the primary reason why it was recognised as a PU of this type. Moreveor, the PU adheres to one of the seven semantic constraints of irreversible binomials listed by Fiedler, according to which the element expressing the idea of here is the first element in a binomial (41).

With regard to the phonological constraints of irreversible binomials, the PU in question contains the following properties: the monosyllabic first element in the binomial featuring a monophthong, while the second element contains a diphthong; furthermore, there are no final consonants in the second element, while there is a single final consonant in the first element.

With regard to its semantic properties, rock n' roll consists of two elements expressing mutually complementary actions; however, the notions denoted by the constituents cannot be categorised according to the above-mentioned semantic constraints of irreversible binomials with any degree of certainty.

From a phonological perspective, rock n' roll meets the following criteria: the monosyllabic first element in the binomial contains a short vowel, followed by the long vowel of the second monosyllabic constituent; moreover, the first element ends with a plosive, while the second one ends with a liquid.

4.3. Stereotyped Comparisons

The entire corpus does not contain a single instance of a stereotyped comparison. Although it may appear initially that like a mother, a PU previously discussed in the section dedicated to phonological nominations, qualifies as a stereotyped comparison, such conclusion is proven to be incorrect upon further inspection. In fact, there are three reasons why it should be considered a phraseological nomination. Firstly, the PU in question can be perceived as an equivalent of an adjective such as "intense" or "splitting" (in the lyrics, it is used to describe a headache). Secondly, the previous argument emphasises the fact that it denotes a specific state, thus fulfilling the conditions necessary for its induction among the phraseological nominations extracted from the corpus. Thirdly, since it describes a noun phrase (a headache) by replacing an adjective that would be commonly used to describe it, like a mother does not conform to either of the two prevalent structural types of stereotyped comparisons listed by Fiedler, in which a comparison is used in combination with an adjective to describe a noun phrase (the first type) or to describe a verb (the second type) (Fiedler 43). Taking these arguments into consideration, it appears reasonable to classify like a mother as an instance of a phraseological nomination rather than that of a stereotyped comparison.

4.4. Proverbs

Table 3 and the following text present the five proverbs found in the corpus: nothin' lasts forever, silence isn't golden, judge a book by its cover, 'Why let one bad apple spoil the whole damn bunch?' and home is where the heart is.

Table 3
Overview of Proverbs

	Phraseological unit	Dictionary entry/Reference	Meaning
1	nothin' lasts forever	nothing lasts forever - Quora	'Nothing in this world is permanent.'
2	silence isn't golden	silence is golden - The Phrase	'A proverbial saying, often used in circumstances where it is thought that saying nothing is preferable

		Finder	to speaking.'
3	judge a book	don't judge a book	'One should not form an opinion on someone or by its cover	by its cover	something based purely on what is seen on the
		- Know Your	surface, because after taking a deeper look, the Phrase	person or thing may be very different than what was expected.'
4	Why let one	one bad apple	'It only takes one person, thing, element, etc., to bad apple	spoils the (whole)	ruin the entire group, situation, project, etc.'
	spoil the	bunch
	whole damn	- The Free
	bunch?	Dictionary
5	home is where	home is where the	'One's home is made up of the places and people the heart is	heart is - The Free	one loves or cherishes most.'
		Dictionary

Nothing lasts forever expresses a well-known truth using nothing in order to emphasise its validity.

Silence isn't golden is a modified variant of the proverb 'silence is golden'. It expresses its intended message indirectly, so that the person at whom it is directed must draw their own conclusion concerning what the statement in question implies.

Judge a book by its cover is a modified variant of the proverb 'don't judge a book by its cover'. The unmodified variant of the proverb serves as both a command and a warning, and is therefore presented in the imperative. However, the type of modification which the proverb underwent in the corpus implies that the message of the proverb is generally not applied in everyday life.

'One bad apple spoils the (whole) bunch' functions in the same way as 'silence is golden' – its meaning is only implied and intended to be interpreted by the person at whom the proverb in question is directed. In the corpus, however, the proverb in question is presented in the form of a rhetorical question, which expresses the lyrical subject's disregard for the message of the proverb, while the addition of the modifier damn shifts the proverb from a colloquial style to a vulgar one.

'Home is where the heart is' is a proverb expressing a general truth; its memorability is ensured by two phonostylistic effects – alliteration and rhyme.

4.5. Winged Words

Table 4 and the following text below present the four instances of winged words found in the corpus. throw me to the lions, cast the first stone, the Garden of Eden, turn the other cheek.

Table 4
Overview of Winged Words

	Phraseological	Dictionary	Meaning
	unit	entry/Reference
1	throw me to the	throw (one) to the lions	'To sacrifice one to ruin, destruction, or lions	- The Free Dictionary	hostility from others, especially for the benefit or survival of the one performing the action.'
2	who'll cast the	cast the first stone	'To be the first to criticize someone or first stone	- The Free Dictionary	something.'
3	the Garden of	the Garden of Eden	'the beautiful garden, described in the Bible,
	Eden	- Cambridge	made by God for Adam and Eve'
4	turn the other	turn the other cheek	'to not do anything to hurt someone who has
	cheek	- Cambridge	hurt you'

It is interesting to note that all four PUs identified as belonging to the category of winged words share two common traits. Namely, each of the four PUs originates from the Bible, and none of the PUs is modified, therefore they retain their original meaning. With the exception of who'll cast the first stone, all winged words in the corpus retain their literary style; the contraction in who'll cast the first stone gives the PU in question a colloquial undertone.

4.6. Routine Formulae

Table 5 and the text explaining its contents present the 16 instances of routine formulae found in the corpus: fuck you, that's all right, time moves on, that's the way, don't you know/don't cha know, look at (how you've spent your life), god dammit, so long, heads up, it's such a pity that, how ya been?, never mind (the darkness), go on, ya hear?, listen to who's talking, it's fine with me and nobody's home.

Table 5

Overview of Routine Formulae

	Phraseological	Dictionary	Meaning
	unit	entry/Reference
1	fuck you	fuck you - The Free Dictionary	'A forceful expression of anger, dismissal, or contempt directed at someone.'
2	that's all right	that's all right - Cambridge	'Used to answer someone who has just thanked you for something or just said they are sorry for something they did.'
3	time moves on	move on (time is moving on) - Longman	'used to say that you must leave soon or do something soon, because it is getting late'
4	that's the way	that's (just) the way it goes - The Free Dictionary	'There is nothing we can do to change or prevent the way things have unfolded or will unfold; this is just the normal way things happen. Usually said of negative events or outcomes that are or seem unfair.'
5	don't you know/don't cha know	don't you know - Lexico	'Used to emphasize what one has just said or is about to say.'
6	look at (how you've spent your life)	look at someone/something - Macmillan	'used for giving an example that proves that what you are saying is true'
7	god dammit	goddammit / goddamnit / goddamn it - Collins	'Some people say goddammit when they are angry or irritated. This use could cause offence.'
8	so long	so long - The Free Dictionary	'Used to express goodbye.'
9	heads up	heads up - The Free Dictionary	'Used as a warning to watch out for potential danger, as at a construction site.'
10	it's such a pity that	it's a pity (that) - Macmillan	'used for saying that you are disappointed about something'
11	how ya been?	How you been? - The Free Dictionary	'a standard greeting inquiry'
12	never mind (the darkness)	never (you) mind (something) - The Free Dictionary	'Don't worry or bother about something.'
13	go on	go on - The Free Dictionary	'An invitation for someone to do something.'
14	ya hear?	do/did you hear (me)?	'If you say 'Do you hear?' or 'Did you hear

		- Collins	me?' to someone, you are telling them in an angry or forceful way to pay attention to wha you are saying.'
15	listen to who's	look who's talking! -	'something you say when someone criticizes talking	Cambridge	you for something that that person does
		_	himself or herself'
16	it's fine with me	(that's) fine with me -	'I'm amenable to this situation.'
	-	The Free Dictionary

The shared property of all routine formulae identified in the corpus is their rather colloquial and/or vulgar style. Once again, this can be concluded by examining the orthography (e.g. don't cha know, how ya been?), as well as vocabulary (e.g. fuck you, that's the way).

The PUs of this type which belong to the subcategory of social formulae are: time moves on, that's the way, so long, how ya been?, never mind (the darkness) amd it's fine with me, The routine formulae in the corpus which can be further classified as gambits are: don't you know/don't cha know, look at (how you've spent your life), go on, ya hear?, heads up and it's such a pity that. The routine formulae in the corpus which belong to the subcategory of expressive formulae are: fuck you, god dammit and listen to who's talking.

4.7. Paraphrasal Verbs

Table 6 shows the seven instances of paraphrasal verbs found in the corpus: give me a whisper, give me a sigh, give me a kiss, got no need for the light, keep an open heart, the lies they sell, make a mockery of humanity.

Table 6
Overview of Paraphrasal Verbs

	Phraseological	Dictionary entry/Reference	Meaning unit
1	give me a whisper	to give (someone) a whisper - Angel City Review/Balboa Press	'to whisper (to someone)'
2	give me a sigh	sigh for someone – The Free	'to release a deep breath, indicating

		Dictionary	anxiety about one's emotional attachment for someone'
3	give me a kiss	to give someone a kiss	'to kiss (someone)'
		- WordReference/ Hackernoon
4	got no need for the	have no need of something	'to not need something'
	light	- MacMillan
5	keep an open	open (one's) heart (to	'to share one's deepest or most heart	someone) - The Free	intimate emotions, thoughts, or
		Dictionary	secrets'
6	the lies they sell	to sell lies	'to deceive someone in order to
		- Lynn Baber/ Elephant	profit from their gullibility'
		Journal
7	make a mockery of	make a mockery (out) of	'to treat something in a way that humanity	(something) - The Free	shows contempt for it, or makes it
		Dictionary	seem foolish'

It should be noted that the paraphrasal verbs found in the corpus, while still colloquial (which is to be expected when taking their basic properties into consideration), lack the elements of the vulgar style. In other words, none of the paraphrasal verbs identified in the corpus contain any profanities.

With regard to the type of meaning which they convey, paraphrasal verbs in the corpus can be divided into two subcategories: the paraphrasal verbs which express inchoative meanings are give me a whisper, give me a kiss and give me a sigh; the ones which express durative meanings are got no need for the light, keep an open heart, the lies they sell and make a mockery of humanity.

4.8. Restricted Collocations

Restricted collocations, a type of PUs whose clear delineation often poses difficulties, have been identified in the corpus in only three instances: you've spent your life, kill the pain, spend time.

Table 7

Overview of Restricted Collocations

	Phraseological unit	Dictionary entry/Reference	Modification	Meaning
1	you've spent your life	spend the rest of (one's) life	reduction	'To spend the
		- The Free Dictionary		remaining portion of one's life (doing something or being some place).'
2	kill the pain	kill the pain (kill*)		'to stop pain'
		- Macmillan
3	spend time	spend (time) - Cambridge		'to use time doing something or being somewhere'

The three word groups in question are identified as restricted collocation due to the fact that each one of them contains a single constituent (spend, kill) which is not used in a literal sense, i.e. life or time can be "spent" as if they were a currency, while pain can be "killed" as if it were a living entity. All three PUs of this type are marked by its colloquial character, which is perfectly reasonable considering the fact that they have originated in discourse. Like paraphrasal verbs found in the corpus, none of the restricted collocations contain any profanities.

5. Analysis of Modifications

The corpus contains 12 PUs which have undergone substitution: take a nicotine, caffeine, sugar fix, so many eyes are on me, don't fuck wit'da bad side o' me, see you along, I've read your last page, livin' on the run, we've been through this, speak a piece of mind, paint a story, your laundry could use washing / We'll hang it up all over town, around this track and listen to who's talking. It should be noted that all but one of the aforementioned PUs are phraseological nominations; the PUs of that type are word equivalents, which enhances their semantic malleability and makes them more suitable for substitution in comparison to the other types of modifications, which focus more on the functional aspects of the PUs. The PUs in question have undergone this particular type of modification for a myriad of reasons. The stylistic purposes of substitution in the corpus are: to make the PUs more colloquial, to make the PUs fit the subject matter or the imagery of the lyrics, as well as to express the lyrical subject's/author's attitude. The functional purposes of substitution in the corpus are: to substitute an original constituent with a word which contains the number of syllables required for the line containing the PU fit the metre of vocal melody or the musical metre (when the lyrics are written in free verse), to make the PU rhyme with another part of the lyrics, as well as to avoid repetition. However, since in most cases it is highly likely that substitution was used for both stylistic and pragmatic reasons, these motivations are all based on speculation and cannot be properly identified without interviewing the respective song writers.

The PUs which have undergone expansion are take a nicotine, caffeine, sugar fix, sit for a spell, right next door, so many eyes are on me, to see the next day, rip you right in two, in their own special way, hang your head in sorrow, lay it all on the line, ain't playing childhood games, went straight to my head, read what we want between selected lines, a fucking waste of time, I'd have all the bases covered, your laundry could use washing / We'll hang it up all over town, the dust is startin' to clear, slipping farther and farther away, lovers always come and lovers always go, 'Why let one bad apple spoil the whole damn bunch?' and it's such a pity that. Unlike substitution, expansion is fairly dispersed across various types of PUs, which may be attributed to its syntactic dimension, which makes is suitable for most types of PU. Expansion is also used for a multitude of reasons. The semantic reasons for this type of modifications are: making the meaning of the original PUs more literal and thus more applicable to the topic of the text in question, emphasising/intensifying the original PUs' meanings and expressing the lyrical subject's/author's attitude. The single functional reason for expansion is adapting the lines containing the original PUs to the metre of the vocal melody or the overall musical metre of the song by adding words with the required number of syllables to do so.

In the corpus, there are 14 PUs which have undergone reduction: rest my bones/head (two variants of the same PU modified in the same manner), your own way, the skeletons, you've worn your welcome, messin' my mind, on edge, put the pen to the paper, money to burn, like a mother, the light at the end, that's the way, 'ya hear?', nobody's home and you've spent your life. Interestingly enough, reduction is used in the corpus with the sole intent of adapting the metre of the lines containing the reduced PUs to the metre of the vocal melody or the general musical metre of the song.

Permutation, affirmation of a traditionally negative PU and negation of a traditionally affirmative PU occur only once in the entire corpus, respectively. Namely, gun of a son is the single occurrence of a PU undergoing permutation; affirmation of a traditionally negative PU occurs in judge a book by its cover, while negation of a traditionally affirmative PU is present in 'silence isn't golden'. The lack of other instances can be explained by the rather particular nature of these modifications, especially since the last two of these modification types require a either a sententious construction, such as the two proverbs found in the corpus, and since all three types affect primarily the semantic aspect of the PUs which they modify. For instance, the shifting of son and gun in son of a gun intensifies the PU's meaning, while the affirmation of judge a book by its cover and the negation of 'silence is golden' both express the author's attitude towards the truthfulness of the two well-established proverbs.

6. Conclusion

The primary goal of this research was to identify and classify phraseological units (PUs) in the songs by the rock band Guns N' Roses. The secondary goal was to examine how many of the identified and classified PUs were modified, the ways in which they have been modified, as well as the motivations for doing so. The source material for the corpus chosen for the analysis was the band's third studio album, Use Your Illusion I. The theoretical framework for the research was English Phraseology: a Coursebook by Sabine Fiedler, which provided the information on the universal properties of PUs, as well as the typology used to classify PUs, whose lexicalisation was confirmed using a variety of lexicographic sources found on the Internet.

The research ultimately revealed that there are 192 PUs in the corpus. With regard to their types, there are 155 phraseological nominations, 2 irreversible binomials, 5 proverbs, 4 winged words, 16 routine formulae, 7 paraphrasal verbs and 3 restricted collocations. The obvious predominance of phraseological nominations could be attributed to their rather abstract properties in comparison to the remaining types of PUs, which in turn results in their inclusiveness. The prevalent characteristics of the overall corpus were found to be its peculiar register, which combines colloquial and vulgar style, with only a select few literary/formal instances. The characteristics of the colloquial style are evident in the orthography of the corpus, where contractions and deliberate spelling mistakes are used to mimic the conversational style of its respective authors, while the multiple profanities contained within the corpus serve as an indicator of the vulgar style, which is also utilised to a great extent.

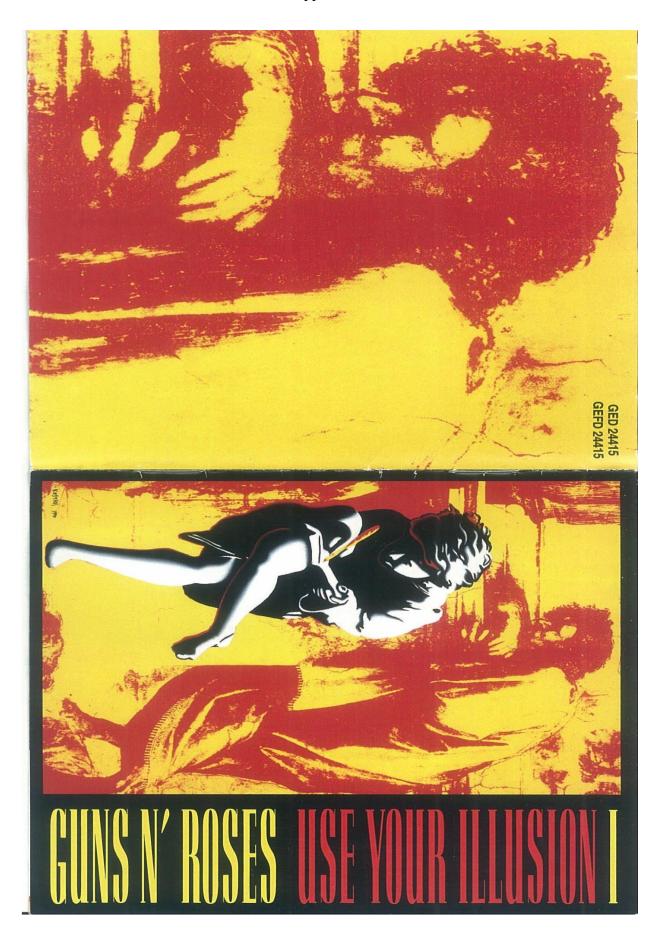

Out of the 192 PUs found in the corpus, 46 PUs have undergone modification; 36 of those 46 PUs are phraseological nominations, which appears reasonable when taking into consideration their aforementioned prevalence in the corpus. The number in question refers only to the occurrence of modifications, since there are three occasions in which a PU has undergone two modifications simultaneously and a single occasion in which two instances of the same PU have undergone different modifications. It should be noted that the PUs in all four examples in question are phraseological nominations, which serves as another indicator of their abstract nature and therefore their productivity.

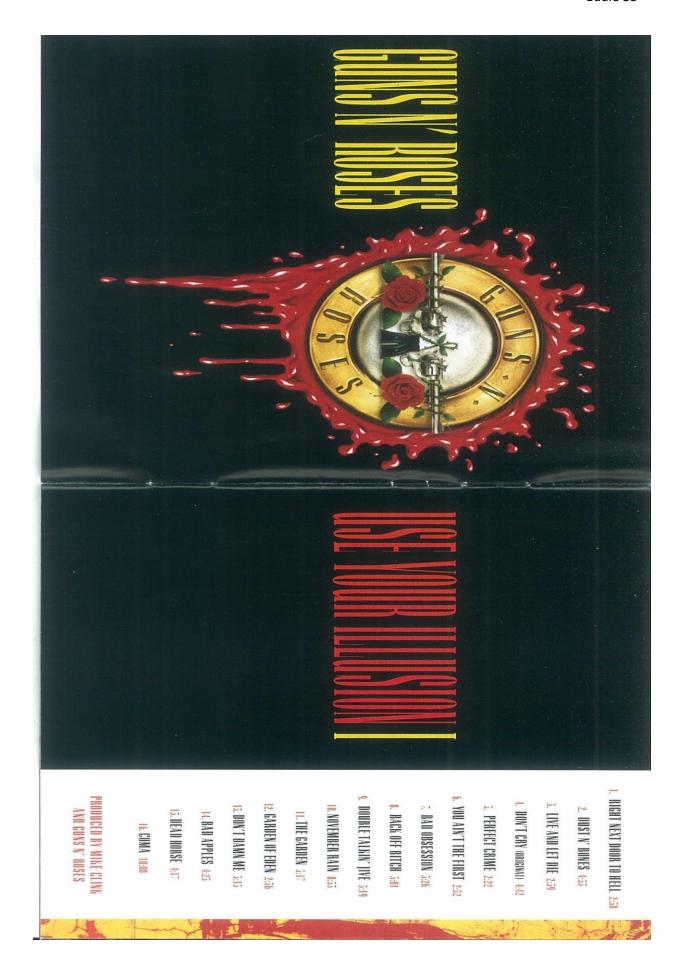

When counting separate instances of each type of modification, there are 50 PU modifications: 12 substitutions, 20 expansions, 15 reductions, 1 permutation, 1 negation of a normally affirmative PU and 1 affirmation of a normally negative PU. The modifications which occurred concurrently within an instance of a PU were substitution and expansion, while the modifications which a single PU has undergone separately were reduction and expansion.

The possible reasons for which PUs have been modified range from semantic (changing the PUs in order that their meaning may be more literal and thus appropriate for the context of the lyrics; intensifying their respective literal meanings) to more functional ones (altering PUs in order to fit the rhythm of the lyrics, adapting them to match the colloquial register used throughout the lyrics, making them rhyme with other parts of the text, avoiding repetition of certain words, etc.). The analysis of PU modifications shows that the three predominant types – substitution, expansion and reduction – were used for specific purposes. Firstly, it appears that substitution was generally used for making the PUs more literal in order to fit the lyrical context in a more precise manner. Secondly, expansion was mostly used in order to emphasise the meaning of the PUs, as well as to make the lines containing the expanded PUs fit the metre of either the vocal melody or the musical metre of the entire song, while only occasionally expressing the attitude of the lyrical subject towards the subject matter of the respective songs. Finally, reduction was almost exclusively used for the purpose of functionality, i.e. shortening the PUs so that the lines containing them may fit the singing or overall musical metre of a particular song). The varied nature of the possible motivations for using expansion for the modification of PUs may be the reason for its prevalence among the types of modifications found in the corpus. Nevertheless, in most instances, it is still difficult to make a clear distinction between the semantic or functional motivations for the modification of PUs, so it would be advisable to view this aspect of differing motivations for modification as a spectrum, rather than a clear delineation of two opposing extremes.

Taking all the findings into consideration, this research has proved to be a rather fruitful endeavour. Above all, it showed the true breadth of the lyrical expression and song writing talent which certain members of Guns N' Roses possessed, therefore confirming the artistic merit of the band in a way that most likely was not previously explored.

WELL I WOULD FLOAT ON BY

SPOIL THE WHOLE DAMN BUNCH HELL IM JUST ANOTHER GUY IF IT WERE UP TO ME WHY LET ONE BAD APPLE ID SAY JUST LEAVE ME BE WHILE EVERYBODY'S TALKIN

BUT NOW WE'RE DOWN IN THE DEEP END WHERE THEY'D LOVE TO WATCH YOU DROWN IF I COULD TEACH MY HANDS TO SEE I'D HAVE ALL MY BASES COVERED GOLD AND CAVIAR SAID YOUR LAUNDRY COULD USE WASHING NOW WHY'NT YOU POUR MY APATHY

AN YOU'LL BE SUCKIN' DOWN THE CLOROX AN WE'RE DOWN ON SUNSET STRIP WE'LL HANG IT UP ALL OVER TOWN
I SAID HOLLYWOOD'S LIKE A DRYER

SICK OF THIS LIFE IM NOT THE ONLY ONE WITH WHOM THESE FEELINGS I SHARE NOT THAT YOU D CARE

NOBODY UNDERSTANDS, QUITE WHY WE RE HERE WE'RE SEARCHIN FOR ANSWERS THAT NEVER APPEAR

THAT WE'RE ALL GOING THROUGH THEN WHEN SHE SAID SHE WAS GONNA LIKE TO UNDERSTAND THIS LIFE. WRECK MY CAR I DIDN'T KNOW WHAT TO DO! BUT MAYBE IF I LOOKED REAL HARD I'D

NEVER CHANGE ID LIKE TO THINK THAT OUR LOVE'S AN I DON'T KNOW WHY YOU'D BE BRINGIN ME DOWN SOMETIMES I FEEL LIKE IM BEATIN: A DEAD HORSE MET AN OLD COWBOY D BE SMILIN GUESS SOME THINGS NEVER CHANGE T MAY SOUND FUNNY BUT YOU D THINK BY NOW WORTH A TAD MORE

AN I DON'T KNOW WHY YOU'D BE BRINGIN ME DOWN ID LIKE TO THINK THAT OUR LOVE'S WORTH A TAD MORE IT MAY SOUND FUNNY BUT YOU D THINK BY NOW BUT SOMETIMES I FEEL LIKE IM BEATIN' A DEAD HORSE

NEVER CHANGE ID BE SMILIN I GUESS SOME THINGS NEVER CHANGE AINT QUITE WHAT YOUD CALL AN OLD SOUL

> IN A WORLD THAT'S FULL OF SHIT IN A WORLD OUR MINDS CREATED IT'S A MIRICLE HOW LONG WE CAN STAY SLIPPIN' FARTHER AN FARTHER AWAY

OH YEAHIII

BUT NOW THE DUST IS STARTIN TO CLEAR STILL WET BEHIND THE EARS

HELP ME

BEEN AROUND THIS TRACK A COUPLE O' TIMES

NO WAY ID BE SMILIN AN I DON'T KNOW WHY YOU'D BE BRINGIN ME DOWN NTIWS HOO OOH YEAH, I'D BE SMILIN ID BE SMILIN IT MAY SOUND FUNNY BUT YOUD THINK BY NOW ID LIKE TO THINK THAT OUR LOVE'S SOMETIMES I FEEL LIKE I'M BEATIN A DEAD HORSE WORTH A TAD MORE

BUT THIS CHEAP INVESTIGATION JUST CAN'T

OF ALL MY TWISTED DREAMS I'M CLIMBIN THROUGH THE WRECKAGE PLEASE UNDERSTAND ME

IM NOT THE ONLY ONE NOT THAT YOU D CARE SICK OF THIS LIFE WITH WHOM THESE FEELINGS I SHARE

> WAITING FOR YOU WAITING FOR YOU AND I'M WAITIN' AT THE CROSSROADS

NOT LIKE THE WORLD WHERE I USED TO LIVE IT'S PEACEFUL HERE AND IT'S FINE WITH ME NO ONE'S GONNA MESS WITH MY HEAD NO MORE I NEVER REALLY WANTED TO LIVE BUT IT'S SO NICE HERE DOWN OFF THE SHORE I CAN'T UNDERSTAND WHAT ALL THE FIGHTIN'S FOR NO ONE'S GONNA BOTHER ME ANYMORE WHERE ARE YOU? CAUSE THERE'S NOTHING TO SEE WISH YOU COULD SEE THIS

JUST TO SURVIVE

ZAP THE SON OF A BITCH AGAIN ZAP HIM AGAIN

MAYBE WE'D BE BETTER OFF WITHOUT YOU ANYWAY IT'S KINDA HARD TO BELIEVE SO WON'T YOU TELL ME WHY WE'D WANNA ANY REASON WHY YOU SHOULD STAY BUT WHO AM I TO TELL YOU THAT I'VE SEEN WITH ALL THE REASONS YOU GIVE IT'S YA LIVE YOUR LIFE LIKE IT'S A COMA

AND I DON'T THINK I WANNA EVER COME BACK TO THIS WORLD AGAIN

HEY YOU CAUGHT ME IN A COMA

(Slash / Rose)

THAT HAS LEFT YOU IN THE COLD ISN'T MUCH FOR CONSOLATION AN ALL THIS CRASS COMMUNICATION AN THERE'S NO WAY OUT ALIVE GOTTA ONE WAY TICKET ON YOUR LAST CHANCE RIDE NO ONE ELSE CAN HEAL YOUR SOU NO YOU DON'T NEED A DOCTOR THEN THERE'S STORIES TO BE TOLD WHEN YOU FEEL SO WEAK AND OLD GOTTA ONE WAY TICKET TO YOUR SUICIDE YOU GOT A ONE WAY TICKET BUT IF HOME IS WHERE THE HEART IS

AND I LIKE IT THIS WAY BUT MY BODY'S CALLIN

NOW I FEEL AS IF I'M FLOATING AWAY OH, MAKE ME COME BACK TO THIS WORLD AGAIN CAUSE NO ONE'S EVER GONNA KINDA LIKE IT IN A COMA

CAN'T FEEL ALL THE PRESSURE

MY BODY'S CALLIN

GOT YOUR LIFE ON THE LINE THEY BE DOWN BY THE WATER BUT NOBODY PULLED THE TRIGGER GOT YOUR MIND IN SUBMISSION

AN SOMEONE TO TELL ME WHEN ALL I MEEDED WAS CLARITY THEY RE LEAVING IT ALL UP TO ME I SAID THEY RE COULD LEAVE SO EASILY IVE GOT THE BONES ON THE MAST SUSPENDED DEEP IN A SEA OF BLACK

WHAT THE FUCK IS GOING ON

WHILE FRIENDS ARE CALLING BACK TO ME WELL I'VE GONE SAILIN, I'VE GONE SAILIN IVE GOT THE LIGHT AT THE END WONT YA COME BACK TO THIS WORLD AGAIN

> WHILE YOU WATCH EM WAVING GOODBYE THEY BE CALLIN IN THE MORNING THEY BE HANGIN ON THE PHONE THAT ANOTHER MAN WOULD NEED TO HEAL THE BROKEN MEMORIES KNOW IT'S GONNA TAKE SOME TIME WHEN YOU REACH THE POINT OF BREAKING WATCHING REPUNS OF MY LIFE BUT I'M STILL OUT HERE WAITING WITH WHAT YOU HOPE TO FIND AND I WISH THAT I COULD HELP YOU WHEN YOU AIN'T GOT SHIT TO LOSE YEAH IT'S EASY TO BE HUNGRY TTS SO EASY TO BE COOL AN : IT'S SO EASY" TO BE SOCIAL FOR A WAY TO SPEND OUR TIME SOMETIMES WE GET SO TIRED OF WAITING WHY D YOUR BEST FRIEND DROP A DIME AND WHEN YOU SAID THAT NO ONE'S LISTENING BUT WE GAVE YOU TOO MUCH TIME AND YOU WOULD HAVE SEEN IT COMIN THERE WERE ALWAYS AMPLE WARNINGS THERE WERE ALWAYS SUBTLE SIGNS IT WAS NOBODY'S FAULT BUT YOUR OWN AND WHEN THE BELL'S STOPPED RINGING BUT YOU KNOW NOBODY'S HOME THEY BE WAITING FOR AN ANSWER

DESCRIPTIVE ANALYSIS OF PUs IN SONGS BY GUNS N' ROSES

Summary

The aim of this phraseological research is to establish the quality and quantity of PUs in the lyrics of Guns N' Roses songs from the band's critically acclaimed album Use Your Illusion I in order to showcase the expressiveness of the lyrics in question. Firstly, the research will identify and subsequently classify the types of PUs contained within the lyrics, as well as uncover the extent to which certain types are represented in the corpus. The PUs will be confirmed using various online dictionaries and other Internet sources, and subsequently classified in accordance with the categorisation presented by Sabine Fiedler in English Phraseology: A Coursebook. Secondly, the modifications which certain PUs may have undergone will also be identified and classified, while the possible motivations for their occurrence will also be explored, also in accordance with Fiedler's book.

DESKRIPTIVNA ANALIZA FRAZEMA U PJESMAMA GRUPE GUNS N' ROSES

Sažetak

Cilj je ovog frazeološkog istraživanja ustanoviti vrstu i broj frazema u pjesmama grupe Guns N' Roses s njihovog albuma Use Your Illusion I, koji je svojedobno hvaljen od strane kritičara. Namjera je istraživanja ukazati na izražajnost pjesama s dotičnog albuma. Istraživanje će za početak identificirati i potom klasificirati tipove frazema sadržane u tekstovima pjesama, te otkriti u kojoj su mjeri određeni tipovi zastupljeni u korpusu. Frazemi će biti potvrđeni uz pomoć raznovrsnih rječnika i drugih izvora koje se može pronaći na internetu, te će potom biti klasificirani u skladu s podjelom koju je predstavila Sabine Fiedler u English Phraseology: A Coursebook. Drugi će se dio istraživanja baviti identifikacijom te klasifikacijom modifikacija kojima su određeni frazemi bili podvrgnuti, kao i proučavanjem mogućih motivacija za navedene modifikacije; i ovaj će dio istraživanja biti proveden u skladu s knjigom gore navedene autorice.
